That Tobacco Trust prosecution in New York will doubtless end in smoke.

A Washington dispatch says President McKinley will demand indemnity from Spain for the death of Ruiz.

It seems that they haven't bugs enough in this country, so a bug pursuer has been sent to the South Sea Islands to catch a lot of new ones.

A book has just been published on "how to write fiction." Easy enough. Just interview one of these Republican prosperity prophets and write it down.

A young man has been arrested in Philadelphia for stealing a horse, and the papers can't understand why he should have been such a simpleton as to steal a horse when he might have stolen a bicycle.

When that Brooklyn woman emptied a bucket of water on the noggin of a bill collector she took an original but not entirely satisfactory way of liquidating the debt, for the collector had her arrested.

The Indianapolis Sentinel says Attorney General Ketcham is after the street car company with a nimble foot and a sharp stick. And it is anxious, doubtless, to see if he will catch 'em.

Prof. Bernard, the air ship man, had a narrow escape at Nashville the other day. When his ship was about half a mile high the balloon split and he came hustling earthward, but fortunately for him the balloon spread into a sort of parachute when it got near the earth which eased the fall and saved his life, although he was considerably shaken up.

Hon. Mr. Bailey says Hon. W. J. Bryan is a good deal better Democrat now than he was when he ran for the Presidency. Well, that's all right. He was good enough Democrat then to suit 6,500,000 21-year old Democrats who voted for him.

CAPE FEAR ACADEMY.

The Cape Fear Academy, which stands as a monument, marking the starting point of many of our young business men, closed its twenty-fourth annual session yesterday. The pupils of this school for the last ten days have been undergoing the usual annual examination, and have shown a most satisfactory improvement in their studies. A large number of them received certificates of distinction, which were only awarded after Prof. Washington Catlett, the principal, had examined each pupil thoroughly.

The closing took place yesterday morning at the academy, on Fourth street, near Princess. After a few instructive remarks by Prof. Catlett, the following pupils were awarded certificates of distinction, their names being given in the order in which they ranked, viz:

Senior Class—Reston Stevenson, Louis Goodman, George Honnett, George Davis, H. B. Short, Jr., A. B. Elliott, J. H. Taylor, Benjamin Bell, Jr., and L. D. Latta.

Junior Class—W. J. Hutaff, Albert Wessell, Hunter Wood, C. K. Davis, J. H. Carney, J. B. Lynch, W. A. Martin, Jr., T. C. Lewis, Jr., Northam Sweeney, W. McK. Bellamy, George Catlett and Adolph Ahrens.

The following pupils deserve especial mention for good deportment and prompt attendance: W. J. Hutaff, Benjamin Bell, Jr., I. H. Taylor and P. Brewer did not receive a demerit during the entire session; Willie James, Sam Potts, Jr., H. B. Short, Jr., and A. B. Elliott received only one demerit during the session; Louis Goodman, C. K. Davis, Charles Myers, W. A. Martin, Jr., Sydney Rheinstein, Reston Stevenson and Albert Wessell were not late during the session; Louis Goodman was not absent a day during the session, and T. C. Lewis was only absent one day. These pupils deserve special mention for the observance of rules, and for promptness and regularity, which duties are the most essential factors in the life of a business man.

The past session of the Cape Fear Academy has been a most successful one, and among the pupils have been many from abroad. The pupils of the school have always taken a high stand whenever they have competed for honors, and many scholars are prepared yearly for entrance to the University and the colleges. Many of the leading young business men of this city have received their foundation or full education in this institution. Mr. W. T. Platt, who received the appointment of Representative Charles H. Martin to West Point, and whose percentage on the examination was 95.7-12, received his training at this school.

Prof. Catlett has been assisted the past season by Prof. W. S. Glenn, of Clinton, S. C.

The STAR understands that Prof. Catlett is now making extensive preparations for next session's work.

MACHINE BARRELS

As Defined By the Inspecting Committee of the Wilmington Produce Exchange.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Managers of the Produce Exchange it was ordered that notice be given that the Rule of Trade as to what constitutes a machine barrel of spirits turpentine will be strictly adhered to, and that all barrels not fully up to standard will be rejected, or classed as country barrels.

For the benefit of the readers of the STAR who deal in spirits turpentine, the definition of a machine barrel, as formulated by the inspection committee of the Produce Exchange, Messrs. C. H. King and S. P. McNair, is submitted below:

A machine barrel is one whose staves and heads have been made, shaped, beveled and curved by machinery, and, in case of dispute, should conform to the following dimensions, or their proportions:

Length of stave should be 31⅛ to 33⅛ inches from croze to croze; heads should be 19⅛ to 20⅜ inches in diameter and perfectly sound; diameter at the bung inside should be 23⅛ to 24⅛ inches; head hoops should be not less 1⅝ inches iron; bilge and quarter should be not less than 1⅜ inches iron. A machine barrel that has been repaired by hand with machine made material shall be considered a good delivery.

Armand Miller's Injuries.

Armand Miller, the colored man so severely beaten near "Easy Hill" on Sunday night, has been in an unconscious state since, with the chances rather against his recovery. He was removed to the City Hospital, to have an operation performed, yesterday afternoon. The operation was performed under the direction of Miller's physician, Dr. T. R. Mask. The skull was trepanned, and found broken from the right to the upper part of the left temple. Just over the left temple the bone had been crushed in. The patient is paralyzed on one side.

Truckers Meet This Afternoon.

The New Hanover County Fruit Growers' and Truckers' Association will hold a meeting at the Court House this afternoon. Among the business matters to come up is the election of delegates to the State Association, which meets here on Tuesday, June 22d.

LILLIPUTIAN WEDDING.

The "Lilliputian Wedding" given last night in the lecture room of the First Baptist Church proved both an artistic and financial success, and was heartily enjoyed by a large audience. The entertainment was participated in solely by little folks, all under eight years of age, and was one of the most unique and pretty exhibitions, of its kind, ever seen in Wilmington, and reflects credit upon the directress, Mrs. C. O. Byerly, assisted by Mrs. L. L. Pritchard.

The performance consisted of the bridal procession and the marriage. The marriage service was all rendered in rhyme; the vows spoken by bride and groom and the responses of the parents of the happy couple, who were aged only in dress, caused much amusement. After the marriage the bridal party adjourned to a bounteous repast.

Minister—Master Walter McIntire.
Bride—Miss Lillie Keith.
Groom—Master Allie Alderman.
Best Man—Master Earl Webb.
Maid of Honor—Miss Cornie Fore.
Father—Master Leland Whitney.
Mother—Miss Bettie Jenkins.
Flower Girls—Misses Annie Walker, Ira Penny, Annie Mitchell and Estelle Kingsbury.
Leaders of Bride's Maids—Misses Mary White and Christine Stevenson
Bride's Maids—Misses Almeria Stevenson, Mary Wescott, Estelle McDaniel, Edith Brady, Bessie Whitney, Roberta Brady and Mamie Mitchell.

Each of the male attendants wore a full dress suit of black, while the bride and bridesmaids were attired in the latest wedding gowns, and each carried a large bouquet of roses. The stage upon which the ceremony took place was tastefully decorated.

After the wedding those in attendance were served with refreshments.

Miss Bessie Burtt played the marriage music.

The performance, which, by the way, was given for the benefit of the Baptist church, will be repeated at a special matinee this afternoon at 5 30 o'clock.

DR. HOGE'S LECTURE

On the Bible and Its History—Delivered at the Y. M. C. A. to a Large Audience.

The fourth and last of the series of Bible lectures before the Young Men's Christian Association was delivered last night by Dr. P. H. Hoge, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. It was received with such general satisfaction and pleasure that the Y. M. C. A. managers ought to feel encouraged to arrange another series. Several of the audience remarked last night that they were pleased with the address not alone because of the charming style in which the thought was presented, but also by the rich stores of information which the careful and painstaking research of the speaker had enabled him to bring forward.

Taking the authorized version of 1611 as a starting point, Dr. Hoge traced it through other English translations to the Latin vulgate and the Hebrew and Greek originals. He said, "We owe our English Bible, under God, to the genius, piety and consecration of Wm. Tyndale."

Taking the Latin vulgate, the translation of Jerome in the fourth century as a new starting point, it was traced back to its sources in the early Latin versions and the manuscripts of the original writings. Step by step the existence and authority of our New Testament books were traced back to the contemporaries of the Apostle John.

The New Testament was then taken up in its growth, beginning with the First Epistle to the Thessalonians, showing the relative time and order of the different books, and the circumstances under which they were written.

The Old Testament as a whole was shown to have the seal of our Lord's approval; its growth in broad outline was discussed, the prophets and other writings grouped into periods, and the aims of the different classes of writings described. The Lord Jesus Christ stands in the center, with one hand on the Old Testament, bearing witness to it as the Word of God, with the other giving the gift of inspiration to the Apostles. When we have joined what books constituted the Old Testament as He had it, and what books came from the Apostles and those associated with them in the work and information, we have the Divine Word.

Prof. Carraway.

Mr. G. V. Burbridge, who has been in the city making arrangements for the coming of the celebrated hypnotist, Prof. Carraway, at the Opera House next week, received a telegram yesterday morning from his brother, who is personally managing the tour of Prof. Carraway, stating that it would be impossible for the professor to continue longer with his performance, as the physicians of Columbia, S. C., where the professor has been exhibiting the past week, advised immediate rest, as the mental and physical strain was too great for the professor. Consequently the engagement in this city, and other cities, had to be cancelled. Mr. Burbridge, however, made a date with Manager Schloss for next season.

— Decidedly the finest specimens of tomatoes we have seen this season were received at the STAR office yesterday. They were produced on the farm of Mr. C. H. Heide, near Wilmington, and are sold here by Messrs. W. J. Kirkham & Co., who receive fresh supplies every day. Mr. Heide has long enjoyed the reputation of being one of the most successful truck farmers of this section.

Rusie pitched for the Giants yesterday, and but for errors by his support would have shut the Reds out. Cincinnati put up a magnificent game.

Boston found a soft thing in the Phillies. Clingman's work in behalf of Philadelphia, in both games, was phenomenal and saved his team from even worse defeat.

BY WILLIAM H. BERNARD.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 12, 1897

BUNCOING THE PEOPLE.

Mr. McKinley, as a Presidential candidate, was put before the country as "the advance agent of prosperity." The Republican supporters of Mr. McKinley declared that the cause of the business depression was the Democratic "free trade" tariff, and that just as soon as the country became satisfied that this tariff would be repealed and a good Republican tariff enacted, hope would take the place of despondency and prosperity would come apace. This was the song they sang throughout the campaign. Delegation after delegation of working men were sent to Canton, where Candidate McKinley shook hands with them, talked to them from his front porch and sent them home filled with the belief that all that was necessary to bring us prosperity in solid blocks was to elect him, and they voted accordingly.

The gold Democrats, or, as they called themselves, the "sound money" Democrats, who didn't like to subscribe to the tariff theory as the cause of the hard times, but wanted to vote for McKinley to beat Bryan and free silver, declared that it was the free silver agitation that was doing the mischief and that when McKinley was elected and "sound money" endorsed by the ballots of the people confidence would be restored and prosperity would come right along. The tariff boomers were playing the confidence game in one way and the gold Democrats were playing it in another.

Immediately after the election there was a spurt by some of the manufactories which went to work to fill "held up" orders, money began to go into the banks and gold into the treasury, there was a foreign demand for American wheat, the prices went up, the exports were large and the exulting announcement was made that the promised and predicted prosperity had come and come to stay. It was reported that the railroads, contemplating an immense increase in their carrying traffic, had given orders for hundreds of new freight cars, for thousands on thousands of tons of new rails to put down new tracks and repair the old, and this was pointed to as one of the surest signs that prosperity had come to stay.

But it seems it only made a pop call, for things not only soon settled down to the old ante-election status, but got worse. The factories that started up and rushed things soon slacked up or extinguished their fires, the people quit dumping money into the banks and carting gold to the Treasury, the railroads quit building new cars and laying new tracks, the organs quit rejoicing over the arrival of prosperity, and the Republican statesmen who encouraged the people to believe that it was coming right along paternally chided them for expecting too much, and for not giving the prosperity propellers time to get down to work and do it up right. Now they are playing the confidence game again, and Secretary Gage is assuring the public through speeches and interviews that when they get the tariff off their hands they will fix up the currency question and prosperity will no longer loiter on the way, but will come with a hop, skip and jump and take up quarters for good. They are as fruitful of promises now as they were before the election, but a little more guarded in their promises, and not quite so bold in their predictions as to time. When they go into the prophesying business now they do it with qualifying conditions that will give them time to let the country pull itself together in the event that anything happen at home or abroad to facilitate or expedite the pulling process.

That's all very well as far as it goes, for it is a good idea to keep up the hope and courage of the people, for if they are impressed with the belief that they are prosperous or nearing prosperity it is the next thing to being prosperous, and it is possible that the feeling may be somewhat instrumental in bringing prosperity sooner, provided the other conditions put in an appearance.

But, seriously, what is there in the conditions, present or prospective, to justify sanguine anticipations? There can be no return of prosperity until the conditions improve at home and abroad, and it is impossible to improve these conditions by such quack remedies as protective tariffs. These may be stimulants when the other conditions are favorable, but you might as well undertake to strengthen a weak man by slapping a big mustard plaster on him as to bring prosperity to a country by a high tariff when there was no demand or market for the things manufactured. And that is just what they are doing. A high tariff may stimulate manufacturing, but there is no demand for the things manufactured and the result will speedily be overproduction, a collapse and depression as great as there is now, if not greater.

Our farmers and meat raisers are dependent on foreign markets to dispose of their surplus, and the high tariff will be a stumbling block in the way of this. It will handicap our trade with foreign countries, prevent them from selling freely to us and prevent us from buying from them. That's not the way to help our trade, to help our farmers, or our working men, and until they are helped so that they can buy what the manufacturer makes it cannot help the manufacturer. This tariff tinkering as the way to prosperity is the merest quackery and the worst kind of quackery.

MINOR MENTION

It is amusing to read some of the Republican journals in the North when discussing the negro, his status and aspirations in the North as compared with their utterances when discussing the negro, his status and aspirations in the South. When the negro in the South wants anything they seem to think he has a sort of pre-emption right to it, and regard it as a species of race persecution when the white people of the South refuse to concede the correctness of this view and dispute the claim. Negroes are good enough to go to Congress from the South, to go into State Legislatures, into city councils, to be postmasters, in fact, to hold any position, but when it comes to applying the test on the other side of the line where the negroes are few in number compared with the South, and where the opportunities for improving personal qualifications are better, a different tune is played. Some time ago a negro in Chicago was named by Congressman Waite for a cadetship at Annapolis Naval Academy. The negro failed in his examination and was consequently turned down. Like knocked-out Corbett he wants another chance, commenting upon which the esteemed Philadelphia North American, all-wool-and-a-yard-wide Republican, offers the following paternal advice:

"It is to be hoped that Congressman White, of Chicago, will be prevailed upon not to carry out his announced intention of renominating to the Annapolis Naval Academy John W. Smith, the young Chicago colored man who, nominated to a cadetship last month, failed to pass the examination necessary for his admission. Young Smith is of the opinion that this examination was made unnecessarily hard because of his color; but he has re-entered the Chicago High School, and will try to perfect himself in the studies in which he proved deficient on Mr. White's promise to renominate him. It will be far better all around if his plan is abandoned. It is hardly necessary to point out to young Smith the indelicacy of forcing himself where he is not wanted, and Mr. White ought to see the inadvisability in aiding in such an attempt. The young man has had a fair trial, and, having failed, he should be satisfied. There are many other opportunities for him in a different field which hold out greater advantages than he would have in the navy, where his progress would necessarily be very slow. Better to let well enough alone in this case, and it is to be hoped that the matter will so present itself to the minds of both Smith and the Congressman before next September rolls around."

Not to thrust himself where he is not wanted may be be very good advice to the young colored man living in Chicago and seeking to get into Uncle Sam's navy, but if that young man lived in Wilmington or Charleston, or some other Southern city, wouldn't his desire to try again be commended and encouraged by the Republican papers which now think he is pursuing an indiscreet course?

* * *

When Senator Cannon, of Utah, offered his amendment to the tariff bill providing for an export bounty on agricultural products he hadn't the slightest idea that it would be adopted, and neither did any of the ten Senators who voted for it. They were playing politics, in which, however, they were simply doing as the majority of statesmen do in dealing with the tariff question. The majority of the Senators who voted against the amendment were not influenced so much by opposition to bounties, or by any principle involved in it, as by the size of the pile it would require to cash the bounties, estimated at $47,000,000, a rough estimate, for with this tempting bounty there is little doubt that exports would be largely increased. It was simply a proposition to pay an unknown quantity of money, the quantity being governed not by any act of the Government, but solely by the energy and industry of the producer and shipper, governed somewhat by the demands of foreign markets. Practically it meant that a great part of the revenue received from imports should be paid out on exports, a kind of a see-saw process, which could never be regulated with anything like certainty. It was a wild-looking proposition, and yet if there be anything in the doctrine of protection, it was consistent and logical. The raiser of wheat or corn, or oats, or cotton, is as much entitled to an export bounty as the grower of wool, the skinner of hides, or the manufacturer of any article is entitled to an import bounty, for that is what a protective tariff is. Such propositions, however wild or absurd they may seem, show with striking force the enormity of this whole protective system, which is, when reduced to its essence, nothing more nor less than a legalized system of grabbing and plunder.

Lots of the fellows who worked hard for Hanna and McKinley are now out of a job.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE.

— Raleigh Press Visitor: Marshal O. J. Carroll returned from Washington, D. C., last night, and we are pleased to note that the trumped-up charges against him have been promptly dismissed by the Government. The charges amounted to nothing and were preferred without Mr. Dockery's consent.

— Newbern Journal: Some sturgeon fishermen captured bigger game than usual yesterday. N. W. Byan and three of his men, all colored, were coming up the Neuse river and as they got opposite Slocum's creek they spied a bear swimming across the creek. They sailed the boat close to the bear and one of the men dispatched him with an ax. The animal was a young black bear, five feet in length and was brought to Newbern and sold.

— Dunn Union: We learn that the dwelling and all the household goods of Mr. Robert Carpenter, a farmer of Buckhorn township, this county, was destroyed by fire Saturday night. Supposed to be the work of an incendiary. —— Mad dogs are creating some excitement in the county west of here on this side of the river. In Black River township a mad dog bit five dogs, all of which went mad, and in Averasboro and Grove there are some mad dogs and sheep supposed to have been bitten by a mad dog.

— Monroe Enquirer: Mr. L. D. H. Williams, a well known citizen of New Salem township, died Tuesday morning, aged about 62 years. He had been sick only since the Saturday before with pneumonia. —— Some time ago during one of the thunder storms that have been so prevalent of late lightning struck in the vicinity of Mr. Geo. D. Wolfe's, west of Monroe, and behaved in quite an unusual manner. It struck at the head of a small branch and followed the course of the branch for quite a distance, throwing the water and the rocks out of the bed to either side.

— Fayetteville Observer: Archie Wright and Mose Womack are victims of a new "gold cure." A negro quack doctor calling himself Dr. W. M. Cogwell, has been working among the colored people for some time. One of his remedies was to procure from his patients a five dollar gold piece in order that he might make it up into pills that would cure instantly. In this way he got several pieces of gold from Wright and Womack. Their eyes have been opened, but the "doctor" has skipped.

— Monroe Enquirer: A gentleman from Vance township was in our office a few days ago and related the following remarkable bit of news: A little grandchild of Mr. Hugh Helms, who lives in Mecklenburg county, not far from the Union county line, pulled up an onion a few days ago and bit off the head and a small portion of the stem. The child's grandmother discovering blood in its mouth made examination, and to her horror found that the child had bitten of a snake's head and was chewing it with the onion. The stem of the onion was very large and hollow and had been broken off some distance from the top and the snake had crawled into the hollow of the stem.

— Chatham Record: We are pleased to announce that a company will, at an early day, be incorporated with abundant capital for the purpose of developing and working the valuable coal deposits on the "Taylor" place in this county. This property consists of about 1,575 acres of land on Deep river, between Cumnock and Gulf, and contains coal deposits that are of superior quality and supposed to be of inexhaustible quantity. It had been owned for many years by Mr. D. F. Caldwell, of Greensboro, who in 1895 contracted to sell it to the Langdon-Henzey Coal Mining Company. That company intended to operate it in connection with its mine at Cumnock (just across Deep river), but on account of the terrible explosion shortly thereafter in the Cumnock mine and the company's financial embarrassment the purchase money was not paid, and Mr. Caldwell proceeded to sell the "Taylor" place to other parties.

—— Senator Hoar in making some awkward attempts to laugh the tanners and shoemakers of Massachusetts into acquiescence in the prospective duty on hides. As in 1890 and in 1892, the laugh of the Massachusetts Republicans would be on the wrong side of the month should they give their votes for the brutal tax on the raw material of leading Massachusetts industries.—Philadelphia Record, Dem.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—— The esteemed St. Louis Globe Democrat can be depended upon to distance all its Republican contemporaries in discovering returning prosperity. A relative of its publisher has been plumped into a snug consulate.—Washington Post, Ind.

—— Republican disregard of the of the civil service law is at last asserting itself, and a horde of republican printers is ready to swoop down on the public printing office as soon as the President issues his order removing that department from the operations of the civil service law. But room must be made for the boys! It is a question which branch of the service will come next.—Savannah News, Dem.

Haste In Courtship.

Among the many faults of the nineteenth century is often reckoned haste. The world, one says, is full of hurry and bustle. Time is outrageously dear, yet in the business of courting men are marvels in patience and leisureliness when compared to what they were in the middle ages. They liked then to commence a courtship by what is regarded now as the next to the last word in it, "Will you marry me?" and they had little use for preliminaries. If the gentlewoman was wise and virtuous, she, of course, knew immediately what to say, for she previously had been informed of her suitor's fortune, as he of her dowry, and a few minutes only were necessary for the young people to see whether they were mutually agreeable or not.—Emily Stone in Lippincott's.

Sarcasm.

Greene — Whom are your children said to take after, Mr. Enpeck?

Enpeck (with a mental reservation) —The younger, with a sweet smile and angelic temper, takes after his mother. The elder, that cross eyed young viper, takes after me, I'm informed.—London Fun.

PRETTY LONESOME WORK.

That of the Lighthouse Keepers Along the Florida Keys.

More ships' bones lie upon the outer reef girdling the keys of south Florida than perhaps upon any other shoals, excepting Hatteras, in this country. Captain Thomas S. Eells, agent of the Lloyds in this city, has a record of shipwrecks on the coast of Florida for many years, and the aggregate of losses foots up surprisingly high in the millions of dollars.

The strait of Florida has long been an ocean highway for steamers and sailing ships bound from foreign and domestic ports to New Orleans, Central and South America. In fact, the outlet of the great gulf of Mexico, surrounded by rich and fertile countries, has been this narrow strait between the keys and Cuba, through which the gulf stream passes. Consequently it is not surprising that in this narrow strait the caldron where the West Indian hurricanes generate, with its concealed reefs of cruel coral, thousands of vessels have ended their careers, and more than thousands of men have lost their lives. Few sailors pass through the strait now without being reminded of the brave men and the brave ships whose skeletons whiten the sands beneath the surface of the limpid green waters, and some of them, as they watch the storm scud fly across the moon and listen to the moan of the reef buoy mingling with the creaking of the spars of the ship, perhaps have good ground to believe that this place is haunted by demons of the deep and the souls of dead comrades.

It is no wonder that the inhabitants of the keys, the "Conchs," have grown rich in wrecking. In these latter days, however, there are fewer wrecks in the strait than there were some years ago, for Uncle Sam has marked the contour of the dangerous hidden reef with a fine system of lighthouses, each with a light of separate and distinct character, so that the mariner may know how to shape his course in the blackest and stormiest of nights.

The job of lighthouse keeper is about the loneliest way of making a living in the catalogue of occupations. The mental strain has proved so great in several instances that the keeper grew melancholy to such a degree that he ended it by blowing out his brains. The system is now so arranged that the sudden darkening of an important reef lamp by a suicide's bullet is not probable, for two keepers are stationed in each light for company's sake as well as to guard against sickness.

These two keepers of the key lights for two months on a stretch seldom see any faces except their own and converse with nobody except each other. The lighthouses are on an average 20 miles from land, and ships pass from 10 to 20 miles away. The lighthouses are built of four great iron pillars, founded deep in the coral and towering toward each other. Platforms of steel bind the pillars together, sleeping and storage rooms are constructed, and the lamp crowns all. The place is not perilous, but in a storm must be what the colored folks call "lonesome" to an uncanny degree.

After two months of service the keeper has a month ashore to spend with his family or how he pleases. The families of the reef light keepers are not allowed in the houses. They are looked upon as a distraction that might cause the keeper to neglect his duty. Most of the keepers have developed into omnivorous readers. Some of them, however, have pursued a settled purpose, and one we have in mind prepared himself for admittance to the bar and has since become one of Key West's most eminent lawyers. He has a dramatic manner of expression and learned it, so 'tis said, by "noratin" to the winds and the waves and his single companion.—Florida Times-Union.

The True Background of Life.

The American is often haunted in the midst of all his surface activity with a vague sense that, after all, his life may be deficient in depth and dignity. It is not so often, however, that he succeeds in tracing this defect in his life to its lack of background and perspective, to the absence in himself of a right feeling for the past—that feeling which, as has been truly said, distinguishes more than any other the civilized man from the barbarian. This feeling is to be gained, in the case of the classics, not so much by treating them as isolated phenomena as by making clear the manifold ways in which they are related to the present, by leaving no chasm between ancient and modern life over which the mind is unable to pass.—Irving Babbitt in Atlantic.

Revivified Habit.

The convict under sentence of solitary confinement had utterly collapsed. "For heaven's sake," he begged, "I must have rest! My conscience will not let me sleep—unless—unless, I can listen to the chaplain's sermon!"

Remembering that he had been a pillar of the church, they were disposed to grant his request.

Habit, it must be remembered, is oftimes more powerful even than drugs.—New York Press.

Swiss experts have come to the conclusion that more harm is done than prevented by roping climbers on glaciers. Tourists saved from a crevasse are often fatally injured by the rope cutting into the body. It is now proposed to obviate this by means of specially constructed broad belts.

The first British telegraph patent was granted in the year that Queen Victoria was crowned, 1837.

The True Remedy.

W. M. Repine, editor Tiskilwa, Ill., "Chief," says: "We won't keep house without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Experimented with many others, but never got the true remedy until we used Dr. King's New Discovery. No other remedy can take its place in our home, as is it we have a certain and sure cure for Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, etc." It is idle to experiment with other remedies, even if they are urged on you as good as Dr. King's New Discovery. They are not as good, because this remedy has a record of cures and besides is guaranteed it never fails to satisfy. Trial bottles free at R. R. BELLAMY'S Drug Store.

Sour

Stomach, sometimes called waterbrash, and burning pain, distress, nausea, dyspepsia, are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This it accomplishes because with its wonderful power as a blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla gently tones and strengthens the stomach and digestive organs, invigorates the liver, creates an appetite, gives refreshing sleep, and raises the health tone. In cases of dyspepsia and indigestion it seems to have "a magic touch."

"For over 12 years I suffered from sour

with severe pains across my shoulders, and great distress. I had violent nausea which would leave me very weak and faint, difficult to get my breath. These spells came oftener and more severe. I did not receive any lasting benefit from physicians, but found such happy effects from a trial of Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I took several bottles and mean to always keep it in the house. I am now able to do all my own work, which for six years I have been unable to do. My husband and son have also been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla—for pains in the back, and after the grip. I gladly recommend this grand blood medicine." MRS. COTTON MARKETS.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The cotton market opened quiet and easy, with prices unchanged to 4 points lower and further declined 2 to 4 points. Following the first call business was fairly active for a time, and there was some indication of new outside speculative interest. There were occasional rallies produced by covering. Certain shorts who were able to secure handsome profits were led to cover by conflicting crop accounts, which had a somewhat bullish average. The early cables were disappointing as to the public accounts from Liverpool, while private cables stated that the English cotton trade placed a bearish construction upon yesterday's bureau report. A number of accounts were liquidated or partially liquidated to-day, the shorts being the buyers. The close was quiet at a net loss of 1 to 5 points.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The following are the total net receipts of cotton at all ports since September 1st, 1896: Galveston, 1,242,085; New Orleans, 2,061,193; Mobile, 308 070; Savannah, 838,034; Charleston, 398,973, Wilmington, 284,998; Norfolk, 708,001; Baltimore, 58,843; New York, 103,845; Boston, 137,553; Newport News, 9,707; Philadelphia, 43,666; West Point, Va., 60; Brunswick, 126,161; Texas City, 51,187; Pensacola

The Senator's Striped Underwear.

A western senator, who has always been addicted to the habit of wearing striped underwear, had a narrow escape recently on that very account. The striped underwear worn by the distinguished senator looked for all the world like a prisoner's garb, but of course that aspect of the case did not suggest itself to the senator. While en route to Washington on one occasion the fact came to him in a striking way. It was on a sleeping car at night. The car pitched and threw him out of the lower berth on to the floor, clad in his striped underwear.

The lurch of the car startled other folks, too, and two ladies on the opposite side of the senator stuck their heads out to see what the commotion was all about. When they saw the senator crawling under cover in his striped garb, thinking he was an escaped convict they screamed, and pandemonium reigned. The porter was summoned, whereupon the ladies commanded him to remove the "convict."

It took all the "senatorial courtesy" the senator could rake up to prove an alibi, and he was finally able to demonstrate who he was, but he has since abandoned the idea of wearing striped underwear, having reached the conclusion that plain flannels without stripes are much better and far safer.—Washington Post.

Indian Rainmakers.

All the Indian tribes had rainmakers, and some are yet left. This is one of their methods of operation: A large body of Creek Indians had gathered, all decked out in their best finery. Two elderly men retired a short distance and seemed to be mumbling to each other something like prayers or invocations. After some time a fire was made on the bank of the stream, when the two rainmakers gave an order, and a young man plunged into the river, which was there very deep. When he came up, he had a blue catfish in his hand, which one of the old men took and threw into the fire, the tribe looking on in perfect silence. Then there was more mumbling, accompanied by various contortions and gesticulations, when the gathering dispersed. It rained that night. Perhaps, on the whole, the Indian rainmaker is more generally successful than the civilized, one occasionally appearing on the frontier in times of drought, the former having a shrewder and more experienced forecast of weather probabilities and putting in his incantations at the right time.—New York Tribune.

MY SWEETHEART'S EYES.

Poets have written of hope and love,
Of the things of earth and those above.
They've moaned of folly and sung of fame
And covered with glory some great man's name.
They've chanted their praises of country and town—
Made for their history a wide renown.
Poets have sung of war and peace,
From our own big fights to the wars of Greece.
They've told us fiction, have told us some truth—
Really, they've sung of all things, forsooth.
Unless, perhaps, by some luckless chance
They've forgot to write of my sweetheart's glance.
Ah, mischief is in those eyes of brown,
And love is filling those eyes cast down,
And down in their depths to guard her well
Purity and truth constantly dwell.
Those eyes speak words no tongue could form,
Words that are cold, or wise, or warm.
They've told me things I would never tell—
Said by the coming of May she'll—well,
I almost betrayed it, 'twould never do—
But I know she will; those brown eyes are true.

—London Mail.

SIGNOR SALVINO.

After my old nurse, Jane Williams, had been left a widow, and, worse than that, with two grandchildren to look after, it became one of my duties, as well as one of my pleasures, to suggest various means by which she could make both ends meet. She owned her little house, and as it was a pleasant cottage, just outside of the hustling, noisy part of the city, it often occurred to me that Jane could not do better than rent one of her rooms. She was too old for active work of any kind, and in any event the care of the children would keep her near home. But to my advice in this direction she at first turned a deaf ear. One of her neighbors had aspired to lodgers and had put out a sign to that effect, only to get a man who came down with smallpox the night he entered the house. The neighbor had to burn up half her furniture before she got through with the health board.

"Then look at the expense of them printed notices," said Jane, who counted farthings as most people do dollars. "I'd have to put out a new one every month, for between the sun and the rain and the dust the paper would get dirty, and a dirty sign might make the people think that the rooms was like the sign."

I overcame this objection by offering to pay for all the printed signs entitled "Rooms to Let" that Jane could need, and before I left for my next trip south I had the satisfaction of seeing the neatest placard I could find adorn the doorpost of Mrs. Williams' cottage, and one nice young man had already been to look at a room.

"That will bring you good fortune, Jane," I said in parting with her. "Now remember what I predicted. It will bring you good fortune. I feel it in my bones."

My first evening walk upon getting home, a few months later, was to see Jane. Had she a lodger? Or should I have to pay for scores of soiled and wasted placards and listen to her reproaches? My curiosity rose as I approached the cottage. There was no sign on the door. Evidently she had a lodger. Moreover I could see, even in the dim light, that the house had been newly painted. And when the door opened and Jane welcomed me into the neat sitting room, it didn't take a second glance to tell me that the carpet was new and that the children were better dressed than usual. Jane herself showed the signs of uncommon prosperity.

"Didn't I tell you that lodgers would bring you fortune?" were my first words. "Who is he and when did he come?"

"What!" exclaimed Jane in amazement. "Haven't you heard?"

"Haven't you heard?" echoed the children.

"Heard what?" I said.

"Why, it was in all the papers," continued Jane. "If you find us all alive, Mr. John, you have a right to be surprised. And you haven't heard a word!"

"Oh, Mr. John," shouted both the children at once, "we might all of us been murdered!"—

"Stop, stop," I exclaimed. "Let your grandmother tell me all about it from beginning to end. Sit down there, Jane, and begin at the beginning. So that nice young man turned out to be a murderer?"

"I'll tell you all about it, Mr. John," her face flushing with importance. "It was an awful thing. You may well be surprised to find us all alive"—

"But, Jane," I said, a trifle testily, "I'm not a bit surprised. I should have been surprised to find you all dead."

"Ah," said Jane, "but you don't know what happened. Oh, it was just awful!"

"Well, but go on. Did that young man try to murder you?"

"That young man, Mr. John? Oh, no. He took the room for a week at $3, and I spent 15 cents upon a cake of scented soap for him. He went off without paying a cent. He left a letter in which he said he was going home to die. He took that cake of soap with him too." Jane sighed and went on.

"For two weeks after he left not a soul asked to see the room till one rainy night about 8 o'clock, just as I was a-fixin a pen to write 'Inquire Within' on a new sign, there came a loud knock at the front door. 'Mercy sakes, alive,' says I, 'what can that be?'

"'Perhaps it's a lodger,' says Lizzie, who was studying her lessons at the table there. 'Laws, no,' says I, 'tain't light enough to see the sign.' With that I stepped into the hall and opened the door.

"'I'm lookin for lodgin's,' says a gruff voice, and a big man with a red beard all drippin with rain stepped inside. 'It's not a night for a dog to be out in, is it, mum?' He was inside the settin room before I knew it. Johnny got half under the table, and Lizzie helped me stare at him.

"'Lodgin's is what I want, mum—a place for to sleep in. I see your sign up when I come by here this afternoon, and I says to myself, "This is the place for Bill Crumfit." Bill Crumfit, that's me, mum. Now, it's for you to say whether it is the place for me or not.'

"I kind of hesitated, for his eye was sort of wild, but I could think of no way of getting him out.

"'It's for you to say, mum,' he says again, almost in a shout.

"'My room is $4 a week,' says I all of a tremble. That was double what I always asked, and I thought he might go away.

"'That price is high, mum,' says he, "but as I like the house, I'll take the room. I'll move in right now.' And he stamped the water off his boots so hard that the house shook. Then he asks for a light.

"'A light?' says I.

"'Yes, mum. I don't generally go to bed in the dark when I pays $4 a week for a room. I want a candle. Not,' says he, 'that it is indispensable. For here's what I calls the wanderer's own friend.' And with that he pulls out a bullseye lantern. 'The wanderer's own friend is a wonderful invention,' says he. 'Do you know, mum, that if you open the friend square in the face of a person in the dark, that person won't see nothin at all for quite awhile, especially if that person has been waked up suddint? One night I opened my friend within two inches of an old lady's face. You'd 'a' thought she'd been struck with a club. She went down flat. I don't think she ever got over it. I can't say for sure, 'cause I never called there again. But if you'd 'a' seen her go down all of a heap you'd almost 'a' split yourself laughin.'

"I couldn't see any joke. Lizzie was a-starin at him, her eyes almost out of her head.

"'You have a small family, mum,' says he. 'I always live in a small family—when I can. I've lived in some pretty large families, though. Your interestin daughter which I have the pleasure of seein and your young son in the act of pursuin knowledge makes up your household, mum?'

"'I was that frightened I could only say 'Yes.'

"'And what may your name be, mum?' says he, dancin his lantern on his knee.

"'Williams,' says I.

"'Ha!' says he. 'Williams, eh? Names is all fudge anyway, ain't they, mum? I don't never keep the same name longer than three months—if I can help it. Last month my name was Signor Salvino. And, mum,' comin close up to my chair and nudgin me with his lantern, 'what do you think my name was afore that? Guess, mum, guess,' says he. 'You won't guess it if you try all night.'

"I was so flustrated that when he nudged me again with his lantern, I says 'Jones' spasmodical like. 'No,' says he, a-spittin on my best carpet, 'tain't Jones. But it's like it. Guess again.' And he nudged me with that lantern. 'Smith,' says I, desperate like. 'Fshaw,' says he. 'Smith ain't no more like Jones than Crumfit is like Salvino. Crumfit and Salvino is names what I calls 'far apart. Suppose, mum, you was to know that a man named Salvino—I say supposin, you know—that a man named Salvino had done some murder, supposin he had cut up an old lady into bits and biled her down and sold her for furniture glue—and such things has been done—now, supposin, mum, that a man named Salvino had done this and was to call himself Crumfit, would you see any likeness in the names? Of course not, mum. There ain't nothing like aliases, mum. It's the greatest invention that was ever invented,' says he. 'When a man can get a alias which is the exact opposite of what his name was afore, then, mum, he is safe. If you ever want a alias, mum, come to me,' says he. 'Now, just for curiosity, if you wanted a alias, what would you choose?'

"'I don't know,' says I, a-rubbin my eyes to make sure I was not dreamin. But there was this awful man a-sittin in his wet clothes on my best lounge and a-spittin on my best carpet. If he'd 'a' given me a chance, I'd 'a' sent for the police, but he kept talkin right straight on.

"'So your name is Williams,' says he. 'I knowed a Mrs. Williams once who kept a gunshop in Boston, but you ain't the one, for she was hanged. Well, mum, if I were you and wanted a alias bad, I think if you was to call yourself Mme. Pivoty it would do. Of course the alias must depend somewhat upon what you done. If you only cracked a store or pulled a pocketbook, you might call yourself Skinner or any such name as that, but for anything serious Mme. Pivoty would do. How do you like the name of Pivoty, mum? You'd better remember that name—it might come in useful. I see a kind of wildness in your eye, mum, that makes me think of the great French child torturer, Mme. Oscar. They say she made blue children for circuses by feeding 'em on indigo. She was a genius for puttin children to good uses. She always kept a stock of show children on hand—human skelintons, fat boys, transparent infants and such like. When a fat boy stopped growin, she could turn him out as a skelinton in less than a year. But she couldn't make fat boys out of skelintons—the trainin seemed to injure somethin in their insides. It ain't all children that'll make good skelintons, anyways,' says he. 'Now, your boy there,' lookin at Johnny, 'might do. Mme. Oscar hadn't no success one year, and when she made a dozen failures the police thought she was a-buryin too many infants and fetched her up. She didn't last long after they stopped her; she couldn't live without her interestin work.

"'How do you like Pivoty, mum?' says he again after spittin on my carpet. I began to suspect by this time that he was a kind of lunatic, and I was a-shakin all over.

"'It's a very pretty name,' says I.

"'Pretty, mum? says he. 'With that name, mum, you might do anything and never get found out. You needn't be afeared, mum, to go ahead. I can see that if you was sure of knowin enough aliases you'd make a name for yourself.'

"His sayin this kind of riled me, if he was a lunatic, but I was afraid to stir an inch. After awhile he jumps up and wants to go to his room. So I makes a sign to Lizzie to go with me, and he followed, feelin of Johnny's arm as he went and sayin that he'd make a good skelinton. When he got to the room, he shook my hand and said 'Good night, sweet angel!' Then he shut the door, and you could have knocked me down with a feather.

"It was 10 o'clock and here I was, with nobody in the house but the children and a big manise full of all kinds of murderous notions. But I sent Johnny round to the police station to say that we had a lunatic murderer in the house. The police' captain came in five minutes.

"'Mrs. Williams,' says he, 'you've got a lunatic worth havin. He went crazy readin dime novels when he was a boy, and escaped from the asylum last week. His friends offer $1,000 for his capture.'

"The captain and two of his men went up and brought him down. He was quiet enough and seemed amused like. When they was takin him out of the door, he says to me: 'Remember, mum, what I told you. When you gets into trouble, you know what to do.'

"The very next week I was paid the $1,000. I washed the sign off the front door, and I guess, Mr. John, that it will stay off."—Hartford Times.

Congressional Obituaries.

The obituary addresses delivered upon the occasion of the death of a member of congress cost the government a good deal of money. Usually 12,000 copies are printed, with a steel plate portrait of the deceased; 50 of which, bound in full morocco with gilt edges, are for the family of the dead congressman. The cost of obituary volumes in the Fifty-first congress was over $50,000.

Chilblains.

"A Grandmother," writing to an exchange, gives the following as a specific for chilblains: Get 5 cents' worth of alum, put it in a bowl, pour on enough boiling water to cover, let stand till cool, and bathe the feet night and morning. It will effect a cure when other means have failed.

Slow Literary Production.

"I suppose you'll hardly believe it," said the colonel, who is writing the libretto of a comic opera, "but I began work right after dinner last night and worked hard till 3 o'clock this morning on eight lines—just eight lines."

"That's nothing," calmly remarked the major. "A friend of mine has been working for the last six years on one sentence."—Chicago Times-Herald.

A CHINESE EXECUTION.

How Murderers Are Killed In the Land of the Celestial.

The victim, Lai Mit, had murdered a Chinese detective, and his punishment, with all its barbaric repulsiveness, was made as conspicuously public as possible as an example to evildoers. Extensive arrangements were made for the carrying out of the execution. Flags were flying from the battlements of the old fort and from three war junks lying near the pier, and large numbers of Chinese were on the beach.

About 3:15 p. m. a war junk was sighted around the point, and a salute was fired from the fort. This was the signal for the final arrangements for the reception of the Chinese officials. A salute of three guns from the fort was replied to by the Namtau junk, and then the junks alongside the pier opened fire. Other salutes from the fort were followed by loud beating of gongs and salutes from the junks.

The soldiers now cleared a square on the beach close to a table at which were placed three chairs. The first to arrive from the junk were the Namtau court officials, who arranged the table for the reception of the mandarin. The wooden cage containing the prisoner was taken up out of the hold of the junk and carried along the pier by coolies and set down in front of the mandarin's table. The prisoner was rather roughly pulled out of the cage and forced down upon his haunches. He scowled fiercely on all around him, muttering imprecations upon his guards. One of the officials stuck a long bamboo, to which was attached a long envelope bearing Chinese characters, down the back of his chair.

All this time the crowd had been jostling and pushing round the prisoner, and the miserable specimens of cooly soldiers were ordered to clear the way to the execution ground. After several unsuccessful attempts had been made to clear a passage the soldiers, brandishing their rattans, eventually cleared sufficient space to allow of the passage of the prisoner and his guard. The executioner, a tall, muscular Chinese, followed behind, carrying his sheathed knife.

At the execution ground the prisoner was ordered to kneel down on his knees. He was shackled with old rusty irons, his hands being tied behind his back. His cue was wound around his head, and his jacket was pulled down from his neck, which was quite bare. The executioner withdrew the knife, a weapon about five feet long, from the sheath and set the prisoner in position, signifying to him to bend his head forward, and emphasizing his instructions by kicking the prisoner lightly in the chest. The executioner then pulled away the envelope from the prisoner's neck.

Punctually at 4:40 o'clock the executioner swung down his blade, and in one stroke the head was severed from the body, just as Lai Mit was cursing the delay. The head was thrown face upward, and the eyes were staring wide open. The soldiery, immediately on the fall of the knife, fired off a running volley. The executioner lifted the head and placed it at the top of the lifeless trunk and then cut the strings which secured the shackles around the arms and legs. Among the large crowd of Europeans who witnessed the execution was one woman. The head of the deceased was hung up in a cage which was lying on the beach. The body will probably be allowed to remain on the beach for some time.

How the Lantern Was Invented.

King Alfred the Great is credited with originating the lantern. He was so bothered by the candle flames blowing in the wind that he protected them by putting the candles in cow horns, which he ordered to be scraped thin. Our grandfathers made lanterns by punching holes and slits in properly shaped pieces of tin, which were then soldered together. The light which came through the little cuts was always very dim and flickering. It was this kind of lantern which the old town watchmen used to carry when they went about calling the hours and the weather in rhyme:

'Tis one o' the clock; midnight is past.
Sleep on, good friends, the time thou hast,
For rise ye must at early dawn.

The affirmative vote was made up of twenty-nine Republicans, one Democrat (McEnery of Louisiana), one Silver Republican (Jones of Nevada), and one Populist (Stewart of Nevada.) The negative vote was made up of twenty-five Democrats, three Populists and two Silver Republicans. It was the closest vote thus far taken on an issue of importance, and was accepted as showing that any amendment having the sanction of the caucus was assured of adoption.

The vote was taken after a day spent in speeches on the effect of the sugar schedule. The main speech of the day came from Senator Allison, in charge of the bill, and was in the nature of an answer to the charges made against the sugar schedule as a whole, and a defence of it. Senator Gorman, of Maryland, spoke against the schedule and the entire bill, pointing out that its effect was to burden the people without opening up to us new foreign markets. Senator White reviewed the records of Republican Senators on the sugar schedule during the debate on the Wilson bill, arraigning them for inconsistency. Senator Caffrey, of Louisiana, and Senator Stewart, of Nevada, also spoke, the former against, and the latter for the pending schedule, after which the vote was taken.

The first paragraph of the sugar schedule was not finally disposed of up to the adjournment.

At 5.10 p. m. the bill was laid aside and the Senate went into executive session, adjourning soon after.

NEWPORT NEWS, VA. June 11.—The Master Car-Builders' Convention, which has been in session at Old Point since Tuesday, adjourned this afternoon. An effort was made by the Western members to have next year's convention held in the West, but their invitation was not received with favor and the meeting place will be chosen later by letter or ballot.

Schroyer, Chicago & Northwestern, Chicago; third Vice President, J. T. Chamberlin, Boston & Maine railroad, Boston; Treasurer, G. W. Demarest, Northern Central, Baltimore, Md. Executive members—R. H. CRUISER NEW YORK.

Denial of Report That the Vessel Sailed Under Sealed Orders.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—It is now denied at the Navy Department that the cruiser New York sailed away from Boston yesterday under sealed orders as reported. The officials say the ship is going to Newport News and then will return to New York. As it said she will remain a month at Newport News, it is probable that advantage will be taken of the opportunity to dock the New York in the big private dock at that point.

ADVERSE REPORT

Will be Made on Senator Tillman's Investigation Resolution.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The Senate Committee on Contingent Expenses has agreed upon a report on the Tillman resolution for an investigation of the report that Senators have been engaged in speculation in sugar stock during the pending of the Tariff bill. The report will be adverse to the resolution, and it is understood will go quite fully into the merits of the question, showing such investigations as that proposed to be generally barren of results.

ANXIETY AT MADRID

CONCERNING THE ATTITUDE OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Idea of American Interference in Cuba Bluntly Resented—Spain Drifting Again Into Strained Relations with the U. S. Government.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

LONDON, June 11.—The Madrid correspondent of the Standard says:

"The Madrid papers re-echo the popular anxiety and curiosity concerning the attitude which the United States will adopt in the face of recent events. The sensation caused by the reports of a change of attitude increased when it was announced that American tribunals had acquitted filibusters who had been stopped by an American man-of-war. Much suppressed indignation can be discerned between the lines of press articles, of every shade of opinion, bitterly resenting the idea of American interference in Cuba. Everything shows that Spain is drifting again into strained relations with the United States. Indeed, most Spaniards are convinced that the significance of the issues lies in the fact that the Queen-regent has given another trial to the Canovas-Weyler policy, chiefly because the Premier and the Captain-General are both considered best able to show a bold front and to act with energy in case President McKinley and Secretary Sherman should decide to intervene upon humanitarian and philanthropic grounds.

"Any suggestion of mediation shows but little knowledge of the temper and feelings of the Spaniards. Any such step on the part of America would induce all parties, even the Republicans and the Carlists, to rally round the cabinet. Although official circles and the press affect to feel confidence in the friendly disposition of America, it is easy to detect unusual anxiety as to the news from Washington."

LONDON, June 11.—The Madrid correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette says: "It is thought that the Cabinet, as at present constituted, will continue only during the Summer sojourn of the court at San Sebastian and that on the Queen Regent's return to the capital it will be radically changed.

"Senor Canovas del Castillo denies the report recently telegraphed of the retirement of Captain General Weyler, but although for the moment he remains at his post there is the best reason for believing that his resignation has been received by the Premier, to be accepted or not, as the latter deems best, according to the circumstances of the moment.

"In the meantime Captain-General Weyler has sent a telegram to the Premier, recommending that municipal elections be held immediately in Cuba. This may be the precursor of other conciliatory measures on his part, but Captain-General Weyler's antecedents are not such as to inspire confidence among the people of the island with regard to his bona fide direction of liberal reforms, nor is the present rehabilitated government in a position to keep him long at his post in view of the path that will have to be followed for a general pacification of Cuba.

"Reports are current that a private understanding exists between Senor Canovas and Senor Sagasta, by the terms of which the latter is to succeed the former at the proper moment, but not at the present critical juncture, so that the succession to power shall always be kept between the chief parties to the exclusion of their minor factions, including the Carlists and the Republicans."

TREATY OF ALLIANCE

Said to Have Been Definitely Arranged Between France and Russia.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

LONDON, June 10.—The Paris correspondent of the Times says: "I am in a position to affirm that a definite treaty of alliance will be signed during M. Faure's approaching visit to Russia by the Emperor Nicholas, President Faure, Count Muravieff, the Russian Foreign Minister, and M. Hanotaux, the French Foreign Minister. The treaty, whose terms have already been settled, will be one of the most laboriously constructed instruments of the kind. Ever since 1889 it has been in process of construction. Two Czars and three French Presidents, with their respective ministers, have been working upon it, the negotiations often being suspended, owing to death, resignation and similar interruption.

"A military convention was carefully considered, and the instruments exchanged were settled upon the basis of an alliance between the two nations and signed in the early part of 1894. This has been the sole document hitherto binding the two nations.

THE CASE OF RUIZ.

CONSUL GENERAL LEE'S REPORT TO THE STATE DEPARTMENT.

The Spaniards Knew Ruiz Was An American Citizen—He Was Arrested On a False Charge—Kept in Confinement in Violation of Treaty Rights—His Death Caused by a Blow on the Head.

UNITED STATES CONSULATE GENERAL, HAVANA, May 31, 1897.

To Hon. John Sherman, Secretary of State:

Sir—The right having been reserved to make a separate report to my Government in the Ruiz case, I have the honor to submit the following statement, which I request will be filed with the report of the Commissioners:

He was about forty-six years of age, a dentist by profession, married, and resided with his wife and children at the town of Guanabacoa, four miles from Havana; arrested on the 4th of February, 1897, about 9 a. m., at his house in Guanabacoa, charged with being connected with the attack on a railroad train on the night of the 10th of January, 1897, at a point nearly midway between Guanabacoa and Havana, about two and one-half miles from the latter city.

The evidence of his most intimate friends and that taken before the military judge, as per record submitted with the commissioners' report, shows he was quiet and domestic in his tastes, a peaceful American citizen, engaged in the active pursuit of his profession—that he took no part in the military or political proceedings on this island, or had at any time any communication by writing or otherwise with those engaged in the insurrection, and that at the time of the attack by armed insurrectionists on the train he was in the house of a neighbor and friend, opposite his own, in Guanabacoa, until 10 p. m., and then went to his own abode, where he passed the night—and knew nothing of said attack until next morning, when it was known generally to the public.

He was taken from his home and profession, wife and children, carried to jail and thrust into cell marked 4 in the diagram, and whose dimensions are given in the report of the commissioners, being one of the three smallest cells of the jail used for keeping prisoners in solitary confinement. The dimensions of the cell in which Dr. Ruiz was confined are greater than given in my previous reports, which were based upon the statements then received from persons who did not and could not measure it, but the fact remains that he was in a cell alone day and night, with stone walls and stone floor, and with no ventilation for air or light, except a rectangular iron-barred opening or transom above the door.

The manner of his confinement was a violation of article 530, law of criminal procedure, ruling in Cuba and Puerto Rico, which demands that "Provisional imprisonment shall be made in the manner and form least prejudicial to the person and reputation of the accused."

KNEW HE WAS AN AMERICAN CITIZEN.

While the cognizance of his case being confided at first to the jurisdiction of the military authorities was a violation of section 1 of the protocol between Spain and the United States, signed January 12, 1897, which stipulated that no citizen of the United States residing in Spain, her adjacent islands or her ultramarine possessions charged with any "crime whatsoever" shall be subject to trial by any exceptional tribunal, but exclusively by the ordinary jurisdiction, except in the case of being captured with arms in hand, the testimony shows the jailer knew Dr. Ruiz was an American citizen on the day of his arrest—viz., 4th February, 1897—and that the Acting Governor and Captain General of the island was informed of the fact on the next day, but it was ten days after his arrest and three days before his death—viz., the 14th of February, 1897—that the acting Governor General directed his case to be referred to the jurisdiction of the civil court, and that he died before said court considered it.

The improper judicial proceedings, in the first place, and the length of time consumed in getting the case before the proper authority, during which the solitary prisoner was the occupant of a cell, proved fatal.

The testimony shows Dr. Ruiz was a healthy and unusually strong, able and athletic man. That he had no hereditary mental or disease of the heart or other bodily ailments.

He was confined "incommunicado," and neither his wife, children nor friends were allowed to communicate with him. He was carried alive to his cell, and at the end of 315 hours was brought out a corpse, having been subjected to "incommunicado" imprisonment in violation of his treaty rights 243 hours over and above the 72 hour limit.

From the time he was placed "incommunicado" until his death, all knowledge of his condition was confined to his jailers, and therefore there can be no other except that of these officials as to the mode of his treatment or manner of his death, and it could not be expected that in case of bad treatment they would testify against themselves or against each other. So such testimony should be received not with "a grain of salt," but with a barrel.

A witness named Rafael Gallado, who, holds a Government position, testified that he carried, at Mrs. Ruiz's request some bed clothes for the use of Dr. Ruiz in his cell on the same day he was arrested, but the testimony of his most intimate friends, viz., Juan Gratoeos and Jose Puiggros, does not confirm such testimony; and a letter from Mrs. Ruiz to me, written four days after his death, a copy of which is hereby transmitted, says: "During the thirteen days he remained 'incommunicado' they did not allow me to take to him a cot or even a hammock, but only a hard chair, on the 9th of February, when the jail official finally, after my repeated requests, consented or allowed me to send to my husband the chair I send you herewith, and in which you will see the last impressions of a man in his full mental faculties."

HIS DYING MESSAGE TO HIS CHILDREN.

The "impressions" referred to and which I have seen, were sentences around the rim of the back, evidently indented with the nails of the fingers, and which read:

"Mercedes, Nene, Evangeline, Ricardito—Good by, my children of my life. I give you my blessing. Be obedient to your mother. They will kill me. If I am taken to Havana tell everything. Good-by; Rita of my soul."

This chair, Mrs. Ruiz says, she sent for after her husband's death, and I have seen lately persons in whose statements I place reliance that the writing around the rim of the back was not discovered, as the chair was of light color and the indented letters not distinct, for some days after it had been returned to her house.

I make these statements because I found that witnesses who had testimony unfavorable to the Spanish authorities would not give it, for obvious reasons, and if the right to make them appear was exercised, it would result, they said, in their giving non-committal evidence, for in their opinion the mere fact of being summoned would make them 'suspects' considered disloyal to the Spanish authorities on the island.

An autopsy was held on his body on the afternoon of the 18th at Guanabacoa, participated in by two Spanish doctors, viz., Francisco Vidal Alvando and Jose Martinez Castrillion, and Dr. D. M. Burgess, the United States sanitary inspector at this port, at which the United States Consul General was not present. That said autopsy, signed by the two Spanish doctors, declared Dr. Ruiz's death resulted from cerebral congestion; that on the apex or top of the head of deceased there was found a contusion or wound which is described by the Spanish doctors as being a "small abrasion," which only involved the first surfaces of the skin, about a centimeter long, more or less, a centimeter being about two-fifths of an inch, but which is described by Dr. Burgess as being "a severe contusion of about an inch and a half long by a half-inch wide."

I deduce from my knowledge of the facts the following conclusions:

First—Dr. Ruiz was arrested on a false charge.

Second—He was placed under an improper jurisdiction and died before the proper tribunal considered his case, thereby giving him no opportunity to prove his innocence.

Third—That he was kept "incommunicado" in a solitary cell for 315 hours, in violation of his treaty rights, which limit such confinement to seventy-two hours.

Fourth—He died from congestion of the brain, produced by a blow on the top of the head.

UNJUST CONFINEMENT KILLED HIM

Fifth—There are two theories connected with the wound on the head. One that in a state of mental excitement he ran across the cell as described by one of the jailers, and butted his head on the door in a frantic effort to get out. Another, that he was struck over the head with one of the clubs carried by the jailers—by the immediate watchman—who had probably ordered him to cease his cries for relief and for his children, and upon his not doing so struck him with more force than he intended, or it is possible the blow was delivered to make him confess or give evidence against others.

It is possible he went mad, and many causes combined to produce such a result.

His knowledge of his own innocence—his confinement in a gloomy cell, where he was not allowed to communicate with family or friends—or to send or write. Alone, all alone, the thought doubtless impressed itself upon his mind that he was liable in the reign of terror then existing in and around Guanabacoa to be summarily executed at any moment. He loved his wife and children, and in the darkness and loneliness of his cell he was constantly crying out for them. The thought that they were but a few rods away and yet he might never see them again or hear the sound of their voices or feel the touch of their lips and hands maddened him and proved too much for the mind of the distracted and unhappy man, and I thought it not impossible as the long hours passed by, it may have given way and left him a madman. His wife says his derby hat was all battered up and his clothes greatly torn when returned to her.

But whether when bereft of reason he inflicted the blows which produced brain congestion or whether he died at the hands of others, the truth will probably only be known when the hearts of all are revealed—the fact remains, his unjust confinement killed him, and had he been released from incommunicado by the hand of man at the end of seventy two hours the hand of death might not have released him at the end of 315 hours and to day the widow would have had the support of her husband and the moan of his fatherless children would never have been heard in the land.

I therefore, conclude, saving as I have done in all previous reports about this case, that whether Dr. Ruiz killed himself or was killed by some one else, will, under the existing conditions, always remain unknown.

I am very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
FITZHUGH LEE.

FATAL SHOOTING.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 11.—A special to the News and Courier from Laurens, S. C., says: William Franks and his father, Barksdale Franks, went to the house of Mason Clark, eight miles from this city, last night, and called Clark out. An altercation ensued and William Franks shot Clark to death with a pistol, three shots taking effect in the breast. Clark was a farmer and Franks was his employe, but was spending the night with Barksdale Franks, who is a neighboring farmer. The Franks surrendered last night and are in jail. Clark leaves a wife and children, while Franks has been married three weeks. Franks is an albino.

Progress of Peace Negotiations—No Hope for the Early Evacuation of Thessaly—The Amount of Indemnity.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

LONDON, June 12.—The ambassadors at Constantinople to some extent ignore the absence of Tewfik Pasha and continue their negotiations without him. It is understood they have reached the conclusion that it is useless to hope for the early evacuation of Thessaly. The harvest, therefore, will be reckoned a part of the indemnity; Greece will be called upon to pay £1,500,000, and Thessaly will be evacuated after the harvest.

Timothy Dexter.

Whether "Lord" Timothy Dexter, that most grotesque figure in New England's annals, was a madman, an imbecile or simply a humorist who delighted in exciting the wonder and indignation of his staid Puritan neighbors is a question that never received the attention it deserves. Most of the things which he did would pass well enough for jokes nowadays, and perhaps they would have done so in his time had he lived in a region where anybody who did not take himself and the world with deadly seriousness was regarded as hardly entitled to be called human.

Dexter had at least the money getting and money keeping faculty, and it was developed to such an extent that even the shrewdest of his Yankee rivals could not often claim the glory of getting the better of him in a business way. That he put new names on the statues in his dooryard whenever the fancy to do so seized him may have been merely a veiled criticism of New England sculptors, and his book with the punctuation marks all collected on the last pages betrayed originality rather than mania, if one looks at it in the right light. His exportation of warming pans to the West Indies turned out too profitably to have been prompted by sheer ignorance. It is at least possible that Dexter was an early Pudd'nhead Wilson who rather enjoyed the derision of his contemporaries. This theory would have stood better the test of examination if he had not drifted into scandalous ways in his later years, but perhaps that was due to exasperation over the refusal of his fellow townmen to see the point of his jokes.—New York Times.

A Hindoo Made of Rubber.

A Hindoo named Bava Luchman Dass is attracting the interested attention of the London medical profession. Mr. Dass is a Yogi, and if all Yogis are like Mr. Dass the ordinary treatises on anatomy must be subjected to revision. He was exhibited to the Students' Anatomical society of St. George's hospital and introduced by the lecturer as "an unusually complicated specimen of the Indian Yogi—a Brahman, namely, of a very high caste—who goes through certain religious exercises with a view of qualifying himself better for paradise." These religious exercises seem to take a physical form, and Mr. Dass, a little, dark gentleman, sat upon the table and proceeded to exhibit a selection from the 84 abnormal positions which he has put in 40 solid years in learning.

He seemed to have ligaments of the gutta percha persuasion, while his joints evidently work on all bearings. He formed his legs into a cravat and tied them about his neck. He hopped about on one hand and strolled about jauntily on his knees, a position which is said to greatly assist thought, though the thoughts of a white man in such a position would hardly be fit for publication. He folded his legs tightly around his body and stood thoughtfully on his finger tips for several minutes, in which posture he declared he was able to remain for seven days. However, as the medical students did not wish to carry out this particular experiment to its bitter end, Mr. Dass proceeded to tie himself up in a knot and to go to sleep on one leg like a flamingo. Then sitting down suddenly he brought the soles of his feet together, his knees being at such an acute angle that nothing short of complete dislocation could have made the performance possible. The lecturer endeavored to follow his movements on an extremely suggestive looking skeleton which he had by his side and finally came to the conclusion that Mr. Dass had no ligaments at all.—London Graphic.

Treacherous Cape Cod.

Nobody knows how many vessels have been wrecked on Cape Cod since the bleak December day when the Mayflower rounded Race point and sought shelter in what is now the harbor of Provincetown. The number is very great, however, and the loss of life on this most dangerous part of the whole New England coast has been something appalling. A list, admitted to be incomplete, of the wrecks since 1873 shows that 151 vessels, including three steamers, have gone to pieces on the pitiless sands of the cape, and, had not the waves always hastened to remove the evidences of their work, the shore all the way from Chatham, at the elbow of Massachusetts' elbow, to the crook of her bent hand would be piled high with the ribs and planking of shattered vessels. A large proportion of the cape's victims are coasting schooners, with only an occasional bark or brig. These disasters, therefore, rarely attract much attention, but they are tragical none the less, and almost every storm adds to the number of dreadful stories which the lighthouse keepers and members of the life saving service have to tell.—New York Times.

English as a Cursing Medium.

A pleasing testimonial to the resources of the English language was given at Manchester. An inquiry was being held as to a house reputed to be used for gambling. It was frequented by poor Jews, and they were stated in a general way to have spoken their own Yiddish—except when they wished to swear. Then they used English. Our oaths appear to be simpler and stronger than those of any other tongue. The Spaniards', though it must be admitted they are coarser, are too elaborate. They swear, not in words, but in sentences. The same may be said of Italian execrations. French oaths are a failure. They beat us in slang, but in simple objurgation they are nowhere. German imprecations mean a good deal, but that is just where they fail. The essence of a good round oath is mystery. And that is why American swearing, though sonorous, misses its mark. There is too much thought in it.—St. James Gazette.

Hairpin Motor.

A fuse burned out in one of the Wethersfield cars, and the car at once came to a standstill. After a moment the motorman opened the front door, and, putting in his head, inquired, "Can any lady lend me a hairpin?" His singular request was at once complied with, and in a short time the car was again under way. "What did you want that hairpin for?" asked the woman who had supplied it of the conductor when that official came to collect her fare. "To make a fuse out of," was the reply, "and I guess you are entitled to ride free this trip." And she did, while the other passengers applauded heartily.—Hartford Post.
